City To Debut New Electric Three-Wheeled Vehicles

Reporting
Jim Lokay

PITTSBURGH (KDKA) — Some first responders around the city are getting a test drive this weekend at the Three Rivers Regatta.

But it's not a new police car or ambulance, but rather a three-wheeled electric vehicle called a T3.

"They were looking for zero emissions, something to cut down on our fuel usage," said EMS Crew Chief Brian Smouse. "We have a paramedic with a monitor and his gear. He will able to bring it through special events... tight places, because increased maneuverability."

The T3 is similar to a Segway, but with three wheels.

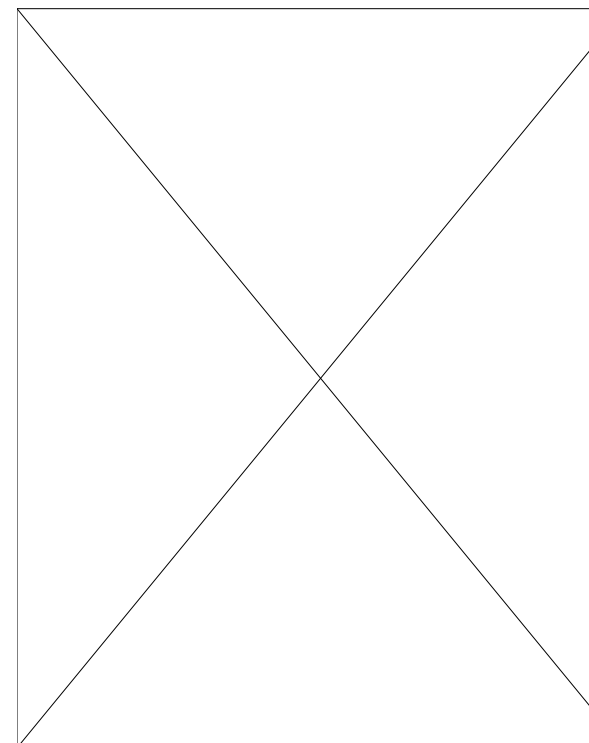

It can turn on a dime and run up to 25 miles per hour.

EMS officials say they will have one T3 for the Regatta and the Fourth of July.

The hope is that the T3s might fill the gap between bikes and motorcycles.

"If the trial basis goes, there could be more," said Smouse. "We have to wait and see
